North Eastern Boundary Extra Session of the Legislature, &c.

It is pretty distinctly understood here, that Lord Ashburton has full powers vested in him to negotiate, and if he sees proper, to settle the question of our North Eastern Boundary with out further reference to his Government, and that he requires a corresponding power on the part of the General Government. To obtain this power, it is understood that the Secretary of State has addressed communications to the Governors of Massachusetts and of Maine, for the appointment of Commissioners to act in behalf of their respective States, in conjunction with the General Government. The power to appoint such Commissioners was vested in the Government of Massachusetts, during the last session of the Legislature of that State, in anticipation of this very contingency. But no such power was given to the Government of this State, it is quite probable that Governor Fairfield will feel it his duty to call the Legislature together at an early day, that they may adopt such measures in relation to it as shall be deemed expedient.

It is sincerely to be hoped that the Legislature, should they be called together, will meet with the single purpose of adjusting this vexed question in an honorable and fair manner, irrespective of party interests. The great mass of the people of Maine, certainly so far as we are acquainted desire this matter to be settled, instead of being kept as a bone of contention for political partisans to require capital.

Map of the United States.

Mr. M. Warden is now in our city obtaining subscribers to Phelps and Ensign's Ornamental map of the United States, which contains, in addition to the delineations, an elegant tracé of steel plate engravings, showing the landing of our Pilgrims at Plymouth, several sanguinary battle fields of the Revolution, the portraits of that noble company of heroes, the signers of the Declaration of Independence, together with the Portraits of the several Presidents of the United States. The map is of convenient size, is well mounted and furnished with a preparation of India rubber and makes an elegant parlor ornament. The subscription price of this beautiful map is but two dollars, to be paid on the delivery of the map, which will be as soon as the subscriber desires to receive it.

Mr. Warden is also obtaining subscriptions for a larger map of the United States, a specimen of which he has with him, published by Mitchell of Philadelphia. This map has all the counties in the several States, colored. It contains in the margin, the last Census of the U. S., statistical tables, and other valuable matter. Either of these maps would make a fine ornament to a room, and in a family, would be eminently useful.

One great advantage in subscribing for these maps to Mr. Warden is, that they can be immediately delivered.

Lectures on the Middle Ages.

Rev. John Lord of Boston proposes to give a course of lectures, in this city, on the Progress of European Society, from the fifth to the fifteenth century. The number of lectures is six. They have been delivered before the principal literary societies in Boston, and quite recently before the Portland Lyceum, and were received with much favor. The lecturer in these and other ways furnishes the most able recommendations, and we doubt not that our people would be glad of an opportunity to listen to him.

The Editors of the Bangor Democrat continue to delight in his vocation of ill-natured apothecary, and no representation. We have been spoken of the great ability of Mr. Lord as a temperance lecturer, have repeatedly recommended him to our friends, and what the Editor of the Democrat cannot say, have attended all his lectures in this city. We have no fault to find with his preaching, even with the Democrat to help him.

Washington, April 15

In the Senate several resolutions were presented, and Reports made, most of them on private claims. A resolution was adopted for commissioners to examine improvement of the S. E. on Stearns Boilers.

The subject of the Oregon Territory was again taken up. Mr. Linn concluding his remarks and the Senate adjourned to Monday.

In the House the pamphlet of James Rumsey, on Steamboat Navigation, was ordered to be printed. The resolutions of several of the States in relation to amendments of the Constitution, were referred to a Select Committee.

The House in Committee on the House, resumed the consideration of the Civil and Diplomatic Appropriation Bill. Mr. Adams continued his speech until three o'clock.

Mr. Campbell of South Carolina replied. The Committee rose and the House adjourned.

Great Fire at Roxbury.

On Sunday night last a fire broke out in a barn, in Roxbury, which, with its contents was destroyed.

The fire commenced at the two story brick building on the corner of Tremont street, occupied by Joshua and Wm. Seaver as a store, the roof and interior of which, were considerably injured, and a large wooden building on Tremont street, occupied by J. Houghton, as a grain store and stable was consumed.

On Ruggles street a number of wooden buildings were destroyed belonging to Jesse Billings and others to the number of six or eight, when it came to Wyman's large floor cloth factory, the main building of which was entirely destroyed. Loss not ascertained, and it is supposed to have been the work of incendiary.

There was a great excitement in Vicksburg at the last dates, about a Dr. Smith of Cincinnati, who had been detected in an attempt to steal three slaves, which he had accreted on board of a Steamboat disguised as Indians, they were discovered and the Doctor arraigned for trial. A large sum was offered two Lawyers to appear for him but they refused, when a distinguished lawyer by the name of Chase volunteered as his counsel. A mob was at once formed headed by some of the most respectable citizens, had taken Smith and Chase into custody, and intended to hang them forthwith.

The City Marshal made quite a haul of "bad people" male and female, last night. He has his eye on others, and there will be no escape for this sort of people but to escape from the city, or to cease from doing evil and learning to do well.

The plate number of the New York Mirror, for April is indeed beautiful. This is one of the oldest, and we may add best literary publications in the Country.

Rev. Isaac Case formerly editor of the Lowell Patriot and for several years Post Master in that city, has taken the editorial charge of the Eastern Argus.

Capt. Howes says he will be on the Penobscot waters with the Telegraph, in perfect repair, about the first of May.

The Packet Ship Louis Philippe is ashore with six feet of water in her hold, off Binghampton. She was from Havre, with 120 passengers.

Professor Shepard will preach at the Hammond Street Church this evening. Exercises commence at 7 o'clock.

We shall publish the report of the managers of the Lyceum tomorrow.

A large lot of logs for the Steam mills, are now floating down the Kenduskeag stream.

Excellent Advice.

We cut the following excellent advice from a communication published in Zion's Advocate. We wish it might be generally read and heeded.

"If we would reach the hearts of our slaveholding brethren, we must not slander or vilify them, but treat them kindly, and persuade and entreat them to abandon the system. Pursue the course the Washingtonians do in the temperance cause, and then we may hope to succeed. But if we use hard and harsh language against our brethren, we drive them from us, and they will not listen to our arguments. Let brotherly love increase and continue, and we shall gain our brother (if any thing will gain him) from the error of his ways. But let no brother judge another, when he allows the same thing in himself, only in a different shape.

A correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiser, at Nassau, N. Y., under date of March 30, says that he is told that the order for the liberation of the slaves who are confined on the charge of murder on board the Cybele had been received there.

A noble heart will disdain to subsist like a drone upon the honey gathered by other's labor; like a leech to siphon his food out of the public treasury; or, like a shark, to prey on the weaker; but will one way or another, earn his subsistence.

Later from India.

The India mail of February 1st brought intelligence of military disasters, which were quite affecting to the English people. The following comments of the London Times embody the news.

Our contemporaries give a still more disastrous account than we can ourselves yet credit of the fate of our troops at Cabool. Of the assassination of Sir W. Macnaghten, in an interview with Akbar Khan, the leader of the insurgents, and by the hand of that Chief, there is, unfortunately, no doubt. It is further said, that the remainder of our 5,400 men set out in despair from Cabool in the desperate hope of fighting their way 90 miles through a country, in itself almost impassable, under the attacks of an enemy computed at about 40,000. The last authentic European intelligence announced this intended departure, and the native reports, which are said always to precede, by some days, the arrival of our own despatches, went on to say, that departure had taken place, with the result to which, probably, the men themselves had made up their minds: their total destruction.

We cannot, however, yet believe the account which is put forward. It is too terrible. It seems not an event of the English empire in the 19th century, but a hideous dream, a horrible tale, when we read of 6000 men massacred almost in cold blood, a British Envoy treacherously murdered, and sixteen of our country women (as is asserted) carried off by an army of savage enemies, with sickening details which we could scarcely bear to write, feeling, as we do, that there are those in England to whom such particulars are not, as to ourselves, mere frightful barbarities, a fearful page of history brought nearer, and piercing appeals to their own personal recollections and affections.

From the Times of Thursday

The worst can no longer be doubted of the unhappy troops at Cabool. Accounts have been received in town which can be implicitly relied upon, and from which the following is an extract.

"On the 18th of January Dr. Brydon staggered into Jellalabad wounded and confused from suffering and fatigue. He relates that our people quitted Cabool under the Convention, agreed on by Major Pottinger, on the 5th instant. The cantonment was immediately occupied by the Afghans, and the English were almost instantly attacked. The march became and continued a constant fight.

"At the Khoord Cabool Pass, about ten miles from Cabool, the ladies were sent back, under an escort of some of Ukhbar Khan's people, who promised to protect them.

"At Tezcan General Elphinstone and Colonel Shelton were made prisoners. The native troops became disorganized and scattered. At Jagdaluk four hundred of her Majesty's 15th, who had before kept well together, became disorganized also broke and scattered.

"Beyond this the doctor knows nothing, having with the greatest difficulty preserved his own life. He gives the names of seven officers whose he knows to have fallen. Brigadier Angueli, Major Ewart, and Lieut. Sturt are among them.

"Some soldiers may have escaped, but there is little hope that the main body have been anything but annihilated.

"We gave up our hostages before leaving the cantonment, Webb, Walsh, Connolly, and three others, chosen, I suppose, by lot. There is more hope, perhaps, for the women than for any one else.

General Elphinstone (the report of whose death must have been erroneous) and Colonel Shelton were taken prisoners. Something like a treaty, not very reputable to us, preceded the march of the troops.

The Times of the next day contains a letter from an officer recently returned from India in which he discredits the statement above and insists that the information could not possibly have passed over the distance in the time allowed. But these opinions of the officer appear to command but little respect. In fact, the worst seems to have been supposed the truest account.

Gen. Gaines left Louisville on the 5th inst., to assume the command of American troops now assembling at Fort Tawson, to maintain order and the integrity of the Western Frontier.

Modern Female Education.

BY LOUIS FITZGERALD TASISTRO

Women and the working classes are, as regards cultivation, similarly circumstanced. Few now dispute their right to knowledge, but the best mode of presenting them with it, and the best mode of rendering the gift beneficial, remains yet an unsolved problem. The recognition of the principle, that it is the privilege of all to ask for knowledge, and the duty of all to give to every one that asketh, and that the only limit to the gaining and the diffusion of knowledge, is not that assigned by man's circumstance, but that marked out by Providence's capacity, the recognition of this principle and this duty forms an era in moral history, analogous to those discoveries in science which have subjected the elements to man's sway. As yet, however, neither has advanced much beyond a state of infancy, and to mature higher in perfection, is probably reserved for the men and years of another generation.

The great misfortune then, that lies in the path of highly cultivated women, is the absence of active occupation for their mental energy, which, when combined with ambition, as it too generally is, lays waste and consumes them. Men have professions and offices, to them belong of right and courtesy, all the activities and authorities of life. Authorship is the only accredited seat for a woman's intellect, and this, by obviating one evil, induces many others. The fever of unoccupied energy is quenched, but by and by, the worse fever of sensitive ambition, or ungratified longing after sympathy, arises, and her position in society becomes yet more false.

Where must the cure be sought? In an inconceivably higher education of what may be called the sense of responsibility.

Wherever genius indisputably exists in a girl, there let parents and instructors fully acknowledge its existence, and on that admission ground a simple but a noble inculcation of these doctrines, that to possess intellect is, in the first instance, an accident, not a merit, that it is by no means a novelty, that, like wealth and station, it involves the most serious cares and duties, and that even superior knowledge is worthless without active virtue.

Parents and instructors must learn to regard something short of this, as efforts to cultivate a girl's mind, for the gratification either of vanity or her's. It is true, true genius is, I believe, did their false Messiahs, going out after it, with an adulating cry of "Lo here, and lo there!" It is making mind subservient to notoriety, instead of use and happiness, it is diverting attainments from the moral application of them, which so often makes genius, mind, and attainments, to woman a snare, an anxiety, and a reproach.

Another remedy may be found in equally high views of the influence of woman being early addressed to the heart and understanding of gifted girls, still based on the doctrine of responsibility. Show her that it is not in the quantity of talent or influence, but in the faithful appropriation of each, that merit consists, and that the moment she is satisfied to use either for mere personal advantage, she has taken a step towards becoming weak and contemptible.

The constant cry of all young imaginative minds is—

What shall I do to be for ever known?

But the next is, if a female, "there is nothing for women to do. She feels in the position of Faou, man has taken the birthright, and she fancies, that for her no blessing is left. Those who would comfort the brooding enthusiast by pointing out literary fame, would act neither wisely nor kindly, few of the many who feel the yearning are equal to the attainment of that fame, and could nothing else be objected to the remedy, it involves no general principle.

The fair answer is, to unfold to the complacent the records of biography, to show her the grand fact, that in most of the triumphs achieved by men, whether in arts, literature, morals, or religion, she has shared, and in the purest form, by having been their instructor, instigator, or friend. Separate and individual triumphs are the lots of few women, and those few are rarely happier for them, but collateral triumphs she may have without number. How few have been the distinguished men, who have not acknowledged that their deepest obligations have at some time or other, been to a wife, a sister, or above all, a mother! Let the mind of every girl, especially of every girl of talent, be sedulously directed to this cheering view of female influence, to the beautiful and refreshing view of her own which it may furnish in the troubled course of daily life.

Women are accused of being misanthropic to enlarged views and principles how should it be otherwise, unless early led to look beyond petty and individual interests? Unless early led to discover the glory of a life set apart to, and consecrated by duty? Unless she be early convinced, that a person for self aggrandizement deteriorates mind, and alloys amiability? Perhaps, after all, the problem most difficult of solution is, how to make heart and mind co-operate tranquilly, imagination and will harmonize; how to manage female intellect in connection with female sensibility. It is, perhaps, impossible that this result should ever be attained without much preparatory suffering, but surely the period of such suffering should be abridged.

The highest, and yet the simplest mode of education consists in watching the mind to manage itself, to understand and make efficient use of its peculiar endowments, to profit by its own mistakes, and to bring into practical exercise, what, in theory, it admires and loves. The melancholy, the romance, the ardor, if not untractableness, that more or less mark every gifted girl, arise mainly from unoccupied energy; provide that energy with suitable employment, treat its possessor with tenderness, and by degrees, what seemed strange and troublesome will pass away.

The old political axiom of maintaining a balance of power among various States, might with advantage be adopted in female cultivation. woman as woman, is generally sure to abound in feeling, gifted woman is nearly sure to abound in its excess, hence, she stands less in need of stimulants than of sedatives, of the spur less than of the rein? yet if sedative and spur are harshly inflicted, instead of a regulated mind we may have a broken spirit. The natural remedy is, to cultivate the imagination by means of the understanding, the feelings in connection with the faculties, the heart through the medium of the head.

As a general hint, there was much wisdom in the advice given by an old mother to a young one "Stimulate the sensibility of your boys, and blunt that of your girls." There is nothing harsh in this last clause but the sound, the process may be effected in all grace and gentleness, by endeavoring to brace the nerves even where the heart is moved, by encouraging reason to sit as judge over sympathies and impulses, by showing that imagination and her conceptions, fancy and her fairy work, must, if good for anything, approve themselves at the bar of the understanding. Poetry and fiction devoured for amusement enervate the mind, poetry and fiction considered as subjects for study, and taken in connection with high reading of other kinds, will have a sobering effect even upon the most imaginative and romantic. It is not thinking that unrealizes the mind, but musing and dreaming. Probably those who live least under the influence of imagination are the practical poets and novelists, and this, from the habit of submitting their inventions to the test of judgment and experience.

Before closing these remarks, we must advert for a moment to a class of females who, as nearly as possible, seem to have all the good of cultivation and none of the evil. They may be called the enjoyers of literature in opposition to the producers, the world never hears their names, and yet they may be clever and influential within their private sphere. Wanting genius, and free from ambition, they are interested in the minds both above and beneath them, their happiness is the chief concern, literature is the garnish of their lives, not its food, they value knowledge, but they never dream of celebrity.

The Single Woman.

The single woman is as important an element of private and social happiness as the married one. The utilities of each are different, but both are necessary. The single lady is, in some points of view, placed in a position of advantage. The wife resigns, or ought to resign, her claims to general attention, and to concentrate and confine her regards, wishes and objects to her chosen companion, and to domestic claims and scenes. She has gutted the public stage, she seeks no more the general gaze, she has become part of a distinct and separate proprietary. But the unmarried lady remains still the candidate for every notice, and injures no one by receiving it. Those of the male sex who are in the same condition, are at as full liberty to pay their proper attention as she is to receive them. Being in this position as to society at large, she is always interesting wherever she goes, if she preserves good temper, and cultivates truly feminine qualities. Turner.

OWL'S HEAD HOUSE.
The undersigned respectfully announces to his friends and patrons, and the public generally, that he has recently made extensive alterations and repairs to said O. H. House, and newly furnished the apartments, wherever needed, so that he flatters himself that he can well accommodate all who may be desirous of visiting one of the most pleasant watering places in New England. A Bathing House, Fishing Boats, Bowling Alleys, and all those implements necessary for recreation and amusement will always be at the disposal and use of his visitors. He promises that his charges shall always be reasonable, and he will pay every possible attention to the wants of his guests.
The increase of visitors, of late years, to this place, by those who are seeking for health or recreation, which the beautiful location has drawn to this house, is the reason why the subscriber has at great expense fitted up this establishment to meet the increasing wants of the public; and his great ambition will be to please those who may be disposed to favor him with their custom.

SMELLING SALTS, or Improved Pungent Bore,
For the last twelve months, this article has been in extensive use, and has taken the place of most other kinds. Its composition does not evaporate like most other kinds now in use.
It is in great demand for the cure of headache, drowsiness, etc., and is the most effectual remedy. For the true article, observe the proprietor's name, WILLIAM BROWN, on the label pasted on the bottle. Call for Wm Brown's Pungent. Price 25 cts.

Pure Extract of Sarsaparilla.
PREPARED BY WILLIAM BROWN, Chemist, 481, Washington street. This is an entire new preparation of Sarsaparilla, without being reduced by the addition of sugar to form a syrup, as it is known by all, that this very much reduces the extract. It is prepared by a new Steam apparatus, that procures the strength without evaporation. It is the only preparation now in use. That our physicians may be made acquainted with its mode of manufacture, a pamphlet has been published and sent to physicians that they may know its qualities. For the past year it has been extensively recommended by them for purifying the blood, removing all humors, diseases of the skin, eradicating mercurial effects from the system, ulcers, &c. It is also extensively used for the treatment of Scurvy, &c.
